

ODD ANTICS LANDED HER IN HOSPITAL

Well-Dressed Woman Walked
Streets Carrying Puppy and Prayer Book.

Walking the streets with a puppy, two prayer books and an empty milk bottle in her arms, a well-dressed middle-aged woman, who gave her name as Grace C. Moore, was taken in charge by Policeman Milon, of the West Thirtieth street station, and sent to Bellevue Hospital late last night from in front of her residence, No. 19 East Thirtieth street.

Considerable mystery veils the identity of the woman. According to the police officer, she is Grace C. Moore, and according to the Bellevue authorities she is Jennie Cramer Moore. She lives all alone at No. 19 East Thirtieth street, which is a brownstone dwelling recently converted into a flat house. There was no one in the flat last night.

At the station-house she was entered as Grace, but at Bellevue she was sent to the alcoholic ward. She named her best friend on entering the Hospital.

The woman attracted considerable attention among the employees of the Hampton Hotel, across the street from her residence. All through the night she walked around the block, up Madison avenue, through Thirty-second street and back again.

Shortly after midnight, trembling with cold and shivering, she entered the hospital and asked if she could get some milk in the bottle she held. She was told the milk was unavailable at that hour in the morning, and she left.

Some time afterward the attention of Policeman Milon was called to the woman. He called an ambulance from the New York Hospital.

When Dr. Borough responded to the call he said the woman was probably insane, and he took her to the New York Hospital. From there she was transferred to Bellevue.

WOMAN FORBIDDEN TO ANNOY AGED BROKER.

Mrs. Margaret R. Moncure.

Mrs. Moncure, divorced from her husband, declares she has for seven years lived as the wife of Jacob Rubino. He shut her out of his apartments and in court yesterday she was put under peace bonds. Now she threatens to bring a breach of promise suit for $25,000 damages.

HE CHARGES BLACKMAIL IN DIVORCE SUIT

Millionaire Sewell Says First
Wife's Lawyer Demanded
$300,000.

The litigation between Barton Sewell, the millionaire Vice-President of the American Smelting and Refining Company, of which Daniel Guggenheim is President, and his first wife, from whom he obtained a Tennessee divorce, Mrs. Julia Thayer Sewell, caused bitter reflections upon lawyers and principals when the case dropped up in the Brooklyn Supreme Court before Justice Garrett J. Garretson yesterday.

Sewell since his divorce married Mrs. Bessie Ritchie, and is living with her at No. 12 West Seventy-sixth street, Manhattan. Mrs. Julia Thayer Sewell lives at No. 14 East Sixty-first street.

The first Mrs. Sewell yesterday made an application to discontinue a divorce action she had brought against him in Suffolk County. The allegation was that the Tennessee divorce was invalid. It was decided that Tennessee should be the theatre for the attack on the validity of the divorce.

Jones & McCormick, lawyers for Sewell, claimed that Mrs. Julia Thayer Sewell is in default, and they want to bring the action to trial to establish the validity of the Tennessee divorce. William J. Maloney, of No. 41 Wall street, appeared for Mrs. Sewell. He said that she had secured a legal separation from Sewell in Westchester County four or five years ago. Failure to support and desertion were the grounds. While Mrs. Sewell was abroad, Maloney stated, and had not been served with any summons or complaint, she was sued in Tennessee for divorce, the allegation being habitual drunkenness.

Divorce a "Snap Decree."

"The service of the summons," added the speaker, "was made by publication in a mail paper published South. Upon returning to the United States Mrs. Sewell decided to test the legality of the divorce and had instituted actions on this line in this State and in Tennessee. She now had decided to drop the New York State action, establish her rights, if possible, in Tennessee and have the divorce, which is characterized as a 'snap decree,' vacated."

Henry J. McCormick, of Jones & McCormick, said an effort was made to extort $300,000 from Sewell under threats that unless he paid that sum Mrs. Sewell's advisers, a firm of lawyers in this city, would cause him to be prosecuted for bigamy in New Jersey and would have him arrested in Tennessee for perjury.

"Mr. Sewell refused to pay a cent," the lawyer added. "He claimed his divorce was lawful and binding, but said that if his former wife would money in excess of $120,000 a year, which was hers from a deposit he had made with the Knickerbocker Trust Company of $150,000, worth of American Smelting and Refining Company stock, he would exchange those stocks and would substitute stocks of the United States Steel Corporation, preferred, and would hand over to his first wife the difference, which he estimated would be some $40,000."

Expected $100,000 Fees.

He offered the lawyer said, to pay over $100,000 to meet his first wife's counsel, whom, he added, he expected to get $100,000 in fees, or one-third of the settlement wanted.

"My client," added the speaker, "bought and sold stocks to keep his bargain, and when Mrs. Sewell backed out of her agreement he was whipsawed in the market and lost $30,000."

In trying to get at Sewell the plaintiff has lent herself to an extraordinary attempt to extort money from a business man. Attorney Maloney, who appears for Mrs. Sewell now, was not her counsel at the time the attempt was made to settle the case for $300,000.

Justice Garretson took the papers in the case and read Sewell's statement at her home last night that she proposed to attack the validity of Mrs. Sewell's Tennessee divorce as long as there was a court to take her case. She denied Sewell's allegations.

BUM, THE CANINE HERO.

Since Bum, the police dog hero, has established his title to a niche in the Hall of Fame by his heroic work in "barking up" all the sleeping people in a Monroe street tenement-house when he discovered that it was alive, he has been persuaded to sit for his photograph. The portrait of the "Pride of the Madison Street Police Station" is reproduced in several characteristic poses in order that all the other dogs may see how a canine hero looks. Bum is only a yellow dog of no pedigree—the policemen used to call him a "valley mutt" before he nearly gave his own life by autoaction in the smoke-filled tenement, and would have died in saving the lives of the people in the tenement had not Policeman Keefe stumbled over his prostrate form on the top floor and carried him down to the fresh air. Two "cops" worked over Bum for five minutes before he "came to," and he had a kuster dinner at Charley Block's Court-House Cafe, where a free lunch has been established for his benefit.

Bum's biography is brief. Before Laura, bartender at the Market House, found him and brought him to the station-house. He served thirty days on probation, sleeping under the sergeant's desk and following the "cops" on their nightly posts. One day last winter Bum found a drunk in the snow and trotted several blocks back to the station to report it, thus saving the man from freezing to death. Bum soon came to understand that the roundsman was the "enemy" of his friends the "cops," and he made it his business to warn the particular "bark" he was serving with whenever "trous" appeared.

BROWN BROWN GOT THE CAKES

Delivered to Him in the Tombs, and This Fact Weighed on the Court So that White Brown's Sentence Was Suspended.

"Mah goodness! Ah maw' he popular with some lady! Ah wouldn't mind stayin' here for evah. She sutlin' is good to me."

So mused William Brown, colored, held in the Tombs for a week past on a charge of larceny. A string of delicacies in the eating line—cakes, pies and fruits—were going to his cell every day, and he couldn't quite figure out just which of the dusky belles on the list was sending them.

There was another prisoner by the name of William Brown, a white man, held in the Tombs on a charge of having stolen a horse and wagon while intoxicated. His relatives sent him dainties in the eating line every day, but they went to the brown Mr. Brown. It was not until George Simpson, the white Mr. Brown's lawyer, appeared and asked to have the client taken before Judge Foster that the mistake was learned. The prisoner George brought out the brown Mr. Brown.

"My client is white," said Simpson. In court he told how the brown Brown had been getting all the things sent to the white Brown, and it so appealed to the judicial heart that sentence was suspended.

ETRURIA SAILS, 15 IN CABIN

Service and Room for 600. Provided by Vessel, at Disposal of Handful of First-Class Passengers.

The luxurious accommodations provided on board the Cunard liner Etruria for some 600 first cabin passengers will be enjoyed on the journey that begun to-day by just fifteen persons.

That is the exact roster of the first cabin, yet the Etruria carries her full equipment of stewards, waiters and other attendants. Each passenger will have the service of seven or eight stewards if he wants it, and as for waiters there will be about three for each course served each passenger at a meal. Other service will be equally liberal.

It is many years since a Cunarder has gone out with such a slim passenger list as this, and it will be sort of lone some travelling unless the party aboard happens to be unusually congenial.

Some of those who sailed are the Rev. Dr. C. B. Newton, W. N. Dickinson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Walter Greenall and Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Oldham.

HUNT DIAMOND ON BROADWAY

Miss Roosevelt and Friends
Form Broom Brigade and Sweep in Vain Search for Lost Ring.

Armed with brooms, Miss Gertrude Roosevelt, who claims cousinship with President Roosevelt, and a number of friends went sweeping through the dusty gutters of upper Broadway to-day in search for a diamond ring which Miss Roosevelt lost yesterday during the noon hour.

Up to the moment of going to press the quest for the sparkler had not been successful except from the press agent's view, but it attracted a mob of the curious.

The brooms used by the diamond hunters were of the common kitchen variety. Miss Roosevelt handled hers with the grace of a maid in a domestic drama, and as a matter of fact she is a member of Proctor's Stock Company. It was while going from the theatre to the Hotel Brelin for luncheon that the gem slipped off her finger.

The lost ring is described by Miss Roosevelt as an elegant token and for that reason its associations are particularly precious, although the diamond weighs three carats, with a consequent intrinsic value.

Notable among Miss Roosevelt's broom-wielders was a fat young man, who, sweating mightily at his work, it was said his name was Phillip Mindell or Mandelbrot—either, was a high-sounding patronymic. He said that "a handsome reward" would be paid for the turn of the ring, and that he wished to further state that Miss Roosevelt had actually lost the bauble.

GOULD MAY WIN OVER RAMSAY IN RR. FIGHT

He Holds 40 Per Cent. of the Road's Stock and Expects to Secure Control.

It is the opinion of Wall Street that the Gould-Ramsay struggle for control of the Wabash Railroad is going to be a lively affair, with the odds in favor of the Gould interests. The preference for the Goulds comes from the fact that they hold 40 per cent. of the stock of all their roads, requiring the acquisition of but 11 per cent. to give them control. They have Edgar P. Wallis, Vice-President of the Wabash, with them, and Mr. Wallis is supposed to represent most of the Dutch and foreign bondholders of the road.

"I am not saying that the story of representing the foreign bondholders to save or not," says Mr. Wallis, "and I have no comments to make on the statement that I hold the key to the situation. But if I do hold the key you may be very certain that I am not about to lend it to Mr. Ramsay." Mr. Wallis is a strong Gould partisan. He said to-day that Mr. Gould had everything for the road and in favor for Mr. Ramsay. He held 40 per cent. of the stock of the Wabash, and he is confident of a victory over the Goulds, but showed railroad men do not believe he can win one.

HOOPSKIRT IS HERE DISGUISED

Under the Name of a "Circlet"
It Arrives at the Dressmakers' Convention from Paris by Way of Chicago.

Ladies, the hoopskirt has arrived. It is here in our midst in disguise, but a hoopskirt by any other name would fill the street just the same. This is the disguise in which you will find the hoopskirt masquerading.

Five ribbon covered hoops which widen from top to bottom, a few yards of silk webbing and a taffeta ruffled flounce. It is called the "circlet" and is designed to supplant the clumsy petticoat. The hoopskirt is being introduced to the New York girl at the dressmakers' convention in the Victoria Hotel, and instead of being a sight for ridicule it is a vision of loveliness.

If it is a wire cage it has the decency not to look like it, and its advent into New York is via Chicago from Paris.

Miss Jane Brewster, who is sponsor for the new hoopskirt, says Parisian women have been wearing these "circlets" for the past two years and that at present every well-dressed Chicago woman has them in her wardrobe.

Miss Brewster said with the fervor that only a fashion expert can call forth:

"I hope before the winter is over that New York women will see the advantage of this skirt distender and will set the stamp of approval upon it. 'Isn't it sweet?' said Miss Brewster, holding up the masquerading hoops. 'And think what it means for the stout woman. Nothing at all around the hips to increase the size of the figure!'"

All the stout ladies present murmured approval.

You see nothing flares out in a semblance of a "hoopskirt" until it reaches the knees. It doesn't even resemble a petticoat. Here is the recipe for the new hoopskirt:

From a narrow belt made of silk webbing fall four vertical bands of the same material, and to these are attached five widening steel hoops about half an inch broad, each circle covered with ribbon so it doesn't look like a cage. The hoops are arranged about a

PUTS PINK TEAS ON BLACKLIST

Mrs. Frake Tells Women All
Luxuries Must Give Way to Business at Meetings of Women's Clubs.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—The exclusion of afternoon receptions, with their pink teas, costly gowns and other luxuries, from the local, State and national meetings of the women's clubs was advocated by Mrs. James Frake, of Chicago, President of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, in her address before the Sixth Congressional District convention of Women's Clubs, held at Maywood. She contended that the receptions usually given were extravagant and unbusinesslike.

"It seems to me," said Mrs. Frake to the 300 women in attendance, "that it is a waste of time for ladies to spend the hours that ought to be devoted to the work of the clubs in gossiping at afternoon receptions."

"The general federation meetings should stand for the average home where luxuries are the exception. We should go to the conventions to transact business rather than devote our time to pleasure."

All the stout ladies present murmured approval.

MISS DE KOVEN MAY SOON WED

Daughter of the Composer Reported to Be Engaged to Charles E. Brown, Who Has Been Divorced.

(Special to The Evening World.)

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 16.—It is reported here in musical and society circles that Miss Ethel De Koven, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald De Koven, of New York, and Charles E. Brown, divorced husband of Mrs. Katherine Brown, are engaged to be married.

Mrs. Hobart Chatfield Chatfield-Taylor, who is Miss De Koven's aunt, gave basis for the story when she said "I have heard several times of such an engagement, but I do not believe it is true."

The report was started on the Onwentia Club grounds at Lake Forest. Miss De Koven is an expert tennis player. Some days ago Mr. Brown slipped during a lawn birthday party at his home, spraining his ankle. He found it impossible to attend to his usual duties and spent much of his time at the Onwentia.

There he met Miss De Koven even more frequently than before, and their display of interest in one another drew upon them the notice of many of the club members. It is said that Mrs. De Koven has been heard to disapprove of the linking of her daughter's name with that of Mr. Brown.
